A psychiatrist who is nearing retirement (Marlon Brando) is called to intervene in a suicide attempt by a young man claiming to be Don Juan (Johnny Depp), the great seducer of women. How he engages the patient, works with him, and is influenced by him provides much fodder for thought and discussion.

Members of the Committee on Psychoanalysis will introduce the film and conduct the discussion afterward.

Refreshments--popcorn, cookies, and beverages--will be provided.

Space is limited. Please be courteous and let us know if you register and then change your mind about coming.

If you are a Met Chapter student or recent graduate member, please RSVP by phone or e-mail (listed below).
